

Saving Faces – improving treatment for head and neck cancer, facial injuries and disfigurement through research

The campaign to create the Alan Rickman Professorship of Facial Surgery

Saving Faces needs to raise £5 million to permanently fund (endow) a Professorship of Facial Surgery. The Professor will lead research with Saving Faces National Facial, Oral and Oculoplastic Research Centre (NFORC) to generate great advances in treating facial injury, deformity and cancer.

We have two aims

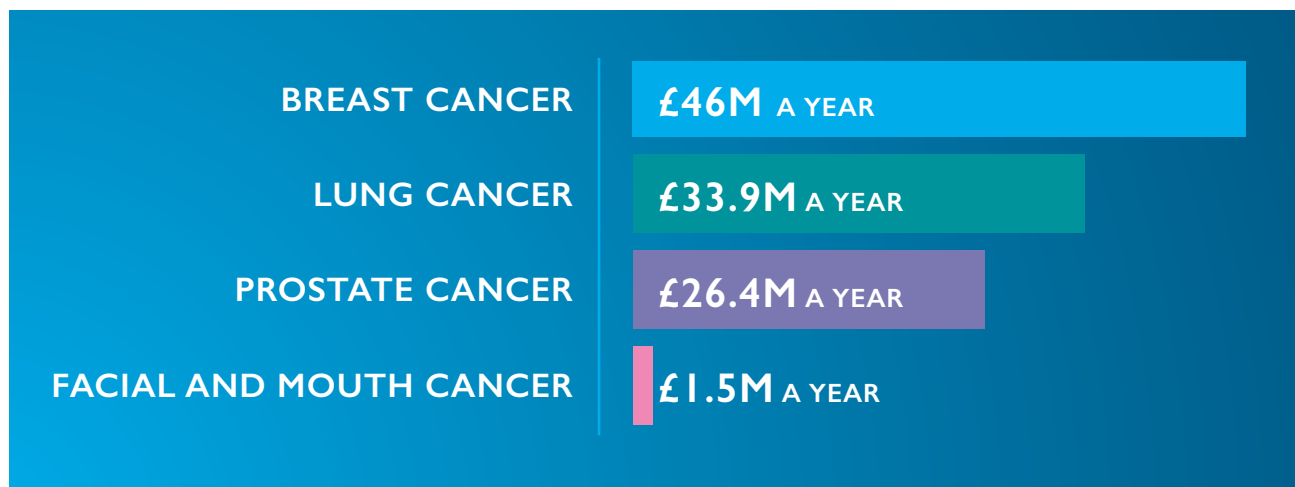

1. The Professor's research will improve the faces and lives of thousands of people around the world.
2. And we are keeping the name and voice of Alan alive, forever associating him with this Professor's research and great advances in treating facial disorders. Millions of people loved Alan and miss him. We are giving them an opportunity to honour him.

Face facts

- 1 million people are treated for facial diseases and injuries In the UK every year.
- These can harm speaking and eating as well as appearance.
- They can leave life-changing physical and emotional scars, undermining self-esteem and dignity.

Surgery is the mainstay of treatment for these conditions.

The Problem – Facial surgery research is severely underfunded

The Solution – Funding a distinguished, internationally recognised, Professor...

...who will be totally dedicated to clinical research with facial surgery patients. They will lead hundreds of surgeons at hospitals in the UK and abroad.

This collaborative approach will rapidly improve treatment and save lives worldwide.

Why is Alan Rickman the figurehead of this campaign?

Alan was a founding Patron of Saving Faces. He launched our National Research Centre and said "I believe Saving Faces' next project is to appoint an outstanding surgical Professor". He bequeathed money to Saving Faces to start the ball rolling.

How you can help establish life-changing research?

- We are asking all our friends and followers to donate what they can, however modest.
- More importantly, we are also asking you to be an advocate for the campaign and persuade your friends and family to donate at least £5 and spread the word to others. That way your donation will be multiplied by thousands of others.
- If you are in touch with trusts, foundations, or wealthy donors whose aims coincide with ours, please put us in touch.
- If you know any skilled social media users who enjoy running crowdsourcing campaigns, please put them in touch.

This field of surgical research seeks to improve the lives of people affected by the most devastating and stigmatising diseases and injuries.
